Title: Jazz buddies: Jacam Manricks and Joe Gilman combine their well-learned music backgrounds in an eclectic duo

Publication Date: November 30, 2017

Summary: Jacam Manricks was apprehensive about moving to Sacramento five years ago.

The prolific jazz saxophonist had previously moved from Australia to Brooklyn, and in roughly a decade, made a name for himself in the New York jazz scene. When his wife got a job offer at UC Davis, he was reluctant to give that up. Fortunately, he also landed a job in the UC Davis music department.

Still, he wanted to play gigs. His New York friends told him to look up Joe Gilman, a jazz pianist since the early '80s and jazz professor at American River College.
